CREATE ENGAGING MINDS OF THE FUTURE

T&L 2900.94: Create Engaging Schools of the Future

This 3 credit graduate course focuses on exploring and using resources found on the internet. We will have 15 speakers sharing their knowledge about robotics, coding, virtual reality, rethinking school schedules and structure spaces. We will read on line articles about job automation and how educators can prepare future ready students.

We will discuss rethinking teacher's roles, grades, assessments and homework. Three days will be face to face with speakers and instructors and two weeks will be on line finishing assignments such as writing action plans, writing a final, write summaries of at least six speaker presentations, view videos, and listing 12 ideas to take back into the classroom.
